

In order to Amateur Radio to continue to grow and remain viable for the foreseeable future, a codeless license class below 30 MHz is imperative.

I support the proposal brought forward to the Commission by the American Radio Relay League. This proposal promotes new and healthy operators to those in the ranks who use frequencies less than 30 MHz.

In addition, these new amateurs will spurn new activity with the various digital modes available. Never, has the morse code requirement been directly related to better operations by an amateur station.
